DEDICATION

I wish to dedicate this work to my mother, Sibongile Maphumulo, my living inspiration on earth. I say, 'Godide! Ndlela! Sompisi!'

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish I had thousand tongues to say 'thank you' to the following people:

(a) Dr. T. S. C. Magwaza, my supervisor for her constructive comments, her vast knowledge in the field and the guidance she has offered throughout my research.

(b) Professor Edgar Sienaert for enlightening me as far as Oral Studies is concerned and for paving the way with regard to the choice of my research topic.

(c) Joan Conolly, the course co-ordinator and facilitator for her endless inspiration and motivations, for her positive input she shared for the development of my thesis.

(d) All my interviewees for their extended generosity and the willingness to expose information about what is traditionally a taboo among the Zulu, that is, virginity testing.

(e) Mr. Fortune Luthuli for lending me his delicate property, the computer. I say Madlanduna!

(f) My youngest sister, Bacebile Maphumulo, for her sincere effort to use her spare time to type my work.

(g) My family, Nicholas my husband, my kids: Nkanyiso, Ntobeko and Thobeka for their patience and understanding in times when I could not fulfil my household responsibilities for the completion of this study.

(h) Lastly, my friends and relatives who were always on my side and encouraging me to go further with my studies.
DECLARATION

I, Nobuhle Nonhlanhla Khuzwayo declare that, except for quotations specially indicated in the text and such assistance as I have acknowledged, this dissertation is wholly my own work and has not been submitted for a degree in this university and others.

ABSTRACT
This study investigates the trends, modifications and motivations of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi (virginity testing) among the Zulu in KwaMashu district of Kwa Zulu Natal.

The study reveals that:

- Ukuhlolwa kwezintombi has been historically regarded as a vital social tool to bring pride to the virgin girl, the parents and the community as a whole.

- The big motive was to receive the full lobola especially mkomo kamama (the eleventh cow).

- Urbanization, industrialization, acculturation, education and religious beliefs led ukuhlolwa kwezintombi to its near demise in twenty years ago.

- In recent years its resurgence has been noticed in most areas of Kwa Zulu Natal and townships to fight against women abuses, teenage pregnancies and HIV/AIDS.

- It is met with a variety of views and emotions with others considering it as valuable while others consider it outdated and irrelevant.

- Virginity testing is regarded as a custom of cultural value and the country is in the process of African Renaissance.

- Regarding the HIV/AIDS catastrophe, one can count on 'True Love Waits' and virginity testing as means of prevention.
CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

KwaZulu Natal is inhabited with people of diverse cultural beliefs, practices and rituals. These characteristics distinguish one community from the other, respecting its traditions that are based upon an identity of interest that bonds its inhabitants together. Some of the rituals and practices have already vanished, if not they have acquired some elements of modifications. These cultural deaths and modifications are due to acculturation, education, religious beliefs, western civilization, urbanization and industrialization.

Ukuhlolwa kwezintombi (virginity testing) among the Zulu in KwaZulu Natal in general and in KwaMashu district in particular, is one of the traditional rituals that are practiced. The practice of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi is centuries old but its history is one of considerable flux. While the impact of multicultural contact in the early twentieth century led to its near demise, in recent years we have seen its revival in some parts of KwaZulu Natal including townships.

I adopt the approach of Jan Vansina (1985:114) when he understands that tradition mirrors society. Vansina maintains that as society changes, so both tradition and the motivation modify. This theory was chosen to examine the extent to which the tradition of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi has been modified to mirror the changes in society, with particular reference to the health and crime issues, viz. HIV/AIDS and rape. The study will focus on the trends of the ritual of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi in KwaMashu district from 1960 -2000.

The codes Po, Pe, Np and Na will be used when referring to the interviewees. More clarity is given in 1.4
1.1. AIM OF THE STUDY

In this research project I will investigate the trends, modifications and motivations of ukuhlolwa kwezinombi ritual. The study hopes to make a vital contribution as it will contextualise and provide written document of a practice that is presently in the realm of the oral tradition. Finnegan, R.(1992:7)maintains that oral tradition as strictly speaking...those recollections of the past that are commonly or universally known in a given culture...and have been handed down for at least a few generations.

There has been little that has been documented on the subject most of which is within the limits of print media. Problems associated with the practice, that is, social, cultural and moral, have not been scientifically examined. These problems are thus not receiving the attention they deserve. I believe that social, cultural and moral problems and concerns are closely related with the motives for the ukuhlolwa kwezinombi, hence the reason for this study.

The documentation of the ritual will result in the collection of data that can be compared and analyzed in terms of the issues related to the practice such as:-

- The reasons for a possible increase or decrease of the practice.
- Varieties of motives underlying such as increase or decrease
- Current debates about ritual.

There has been an ongoing debate on these issues. This is indeed a complex subject warranting an investigation. It is hoped that the study will contribute to an understanding of socio-cultural factors that influence community responses to illnesses, sexual abuse and the HIV/Aids epidemic. This study focuses on the practice of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi over the last ten years. This will then be compared with the practice of the ritual from 1960 where chastity control was highly practiced. Harriet Whitehead (in menarche ed. Golub) (1976:158) observes that the obsession with the loss of chastity is inseparable from status loss in rank conscious society. Her approach has helped this study:

- To examine the relationship between the incidence of virginity.
- To view the role of the status as an element in ukubhulwa kwezintombi and
- To view the past and current status of the girl, her family and the community in which she lives.

1.2. THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK

- Ukubhulwa kwezintombi is a ritual that is characterized by the following features -
  - Changing in terms of motivation and the way the practice is performed
  - Observable and
  - Chastity control

Theories that are going to be discussed below have been used to form the basis of this study.

1.2.1. FINNEGAN, R. (1992) THE THEORY OF ORAL TRADITION

Finnegan, R. (1992:7) sees oral tradition as the way of handing down practices, ideas or values, the products so handed down, sometimes with connotation of being old or having arisen in some "natural" and non-polemical way. Her approach indicates that ukubhulwa kwezintombi is as old as Zulu mankind and it has been handed down from generations to generations orally. Finnegan also maintains that oral tradition, sometimes means any rather written tradition, sometimes only traditions enunciated or transmitted through words. This implies that oral people were clever enough to pass the knowledge and skills through oral style.

Other literate or educated people can not conduct ukuhlolwa kwezintombi ritual. They lack the skill of examining the girl to tell whether she has been deflowered or not. This shows that ukuhlolwa kwezintombi is an oral practice within oral tradition. That is why Finnegan, R. (1992:7) states that the addition of oral often implies that the tradition in question is in some way-1) verbal or 2) non-written, sometimes or the “folk” usually with the connotation of non-educated, non-elite and/or 4) fundamental and valued, often supposedly transmitted over generation, perhaps by the community or “folk” rather than conscious individual action. Virginity testing belongs to the Zulu society or community as a whole, not to an individual person.

Zulus value their traditions and beliefs. They also believe that fortunes and misfortunes are derived from ancestors. If they do not act according to this beliefs and traditions, misfortunes will follow one after another. That is why ukuhlolwa kwezintombi as a traditional custom has been maintained. This ritual is always accompanied by songs and dances as one of the features of oral style. Songs and dances accompany all occasions among the Zulu either joyous occasions or sad occasions.

1.2.2. MARCEL JOUSSE: THE THEORY OF MICROSCOPIC AND MACROSCOPIC GESTES.

Jousse, M. (1990) proposes that human behavior is observable from two standpoints, viz., those of microscopic and macroscopic observers. The macroscopic observer is the audience observer, while the microscopic observer is the performer observer.
This theory of Marcel Jousse, whom himself acquired knowledge and skills through oral style, will also form the basis of this study. In this case of ukuhloha kwezintombi, I have been a macroscopic observer in the sense that I have been observing the performance of the ritual, to collect data as to how the ritual is performed, who performs it, when and where it is performed.

The abahloli (testors) and abahlolwa (testees) according to Jousse are microscopic observers in the sense that they are the performer-observers. Testors and testees are active participants in virginity testing, that is why I classify them under microscopic gestor or performer observers. In order to tell whether the hymen is still intact, the testors have to touch, observe and report to the audience observers, which might be the parents of the testees.

1.2.3. HARRIET WHITEHEAD (IN MENARCHE) ED. BY GOLUB: THE THEORY OF STATUS IN RANK CONSCIOUS SOCIETIES

I adopt the theory of Whitehead, (1976:158) when she maintains that the obsession with the loss of chastity is inseparable from status loss in rank conscious societies.

The Zulus are very status conscious. Around 1960 keeping virginity brought the status for a girl, her parents and the community as a whole. The Zulus believe in ownership. It was a pride to own a virgin girl since the parents would receive the full bride price of eleven cows as a normal number for a girl born from an ordinary family. This in turn would give the parents status of having a large herd of cattle. A man was called “umnumzane” (a real dignified Zulu man) when he had a large herd of cattle. To gain those cattle and status, chastity control over the girl should be highly practiced.
1.2.4. JAN VANSINA (ORAL TRADITION AS HISTORY (1985):

MODIFICATION THEORY.

Jan Vansina, (1985:114) proposes that tradition mirror society. Vansina further proposes that as society changes so both tradition and motivation for the tradition modifies.

_Ukuhlolwa kwezintombi_ is and has been occurring in a changing society. Acculturation, education, western civilization, religious beliefs and other factors cause these changes.

That is why Vansina, (1985:118) when talking about significance; maintains that tradition about events are only kept because the events were thought to be important or significant.

A selection process starts with the eyewitnesses or contemporary reports. As time passes and the criteria of importance or significance change, the selection process continues.

The criteria of importance for virginity testing were status and _lobola_, more especially the eleventh cow, which was not paid if the bride was already deflowered. Currently the criteria of importance for virginity testing are health, which is HIV/Aids epidemic, crime, which is rape and teenage pregnancies.

CHAPTER 2

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF KWA MASHU

2.1. ORIGIN

The name “Mashu” originated from the name of a White man, Marshal Campbell, an informant said. Marshal is father of Killie Campbell who donated with his house at the corner of Essenwood and Marriot roads in Durban to be used as an Africana Library/museum. Marshal loved the Zulu people and could speak Zulu very well hence he related with them. Marshal was a farmer. Where KwaMashu Township is today, it was his cane farm land. He donated the area to the black Zulu people to build their houses. People called Marshal “Mashu” that is how the township “Kwa Mashu” got its name.

The scheme of building Kwa Mashu was embarked upon in 1952. The first occupants moved in on 22 March 1958. This black township lies North of the city of Durban at Duffs Road. The total area of the township is about 2 600 acres.

2.2. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF KWA MASHU FROM 1960-1977

The inhabitants were coming from different rural areas of KwaZulu Natal. Most of the inhabitants came from Cator Manor after its demolition. They moved to Kwa Mashu in February 1960 (Natal Mercury 3-02-60). When Kwa Mashu was first used as a township there were 1883 single houses, 804 semi-detached houses, 236 site and service and 85 single rooms on site and service. Total completed houses in 1960 were 3008. Some of the inhabitants of Cator Manor in Booth Road were against their removal from their slums. They protested at the Durban City Hall holding posters bearing the legends, “We never had it so bad” Saracens are Nazism, Kwa Mashu means ruin”, Hear our case, “Don’t throw us out of our homes etc.
states that Cator Manor Protest Committee led by ANC “stalwarts” was formed which was fighting against their removals.

The hostel accommodation for 2464 people was provided. The cost of building a single house was $242.10.0 and semi detached house was $3.2.0. Houses could be purchased a period of 30 coming years. Two football fields were built and one was still to be built.

Trading stores, general dealers, butcheries were still in the process of being established.

A municipal clinic was already functioning. Buses and trains were available as means of transport. The train was cheaper than the bus.

There were three Lower Primary schools, one Higher Primary, and High School, one nursery school and crèche. Two churches were already functioning. Potgieter, P.J (1960).

In April 1958 there were clashes concerning high rentals of houses. The rentals were too high in relation to the average native income, which was R10 a month. Costs could be reduced only on two conditions:

(i) Allowing increased use of Native service Levy fund for capital expenditure

(ii) Extend the period allowed for the payment of houses from 30 to 40 years.

In December 1958 there were crises concerning the built of squatter camps. These squatter camps would be built as the house-building project was very slow, but there was a fear that the camp would expand and become a shield of illegal practices (Natal Mercury 10/12/1958). Another Crisis emerged concerning the right to be in an urban area. Action would be taken against a native who was illegally in an urban area (Natal Mercury 27/01/1959). In 1959, transport problems emerged. People boycotted buses which were costly. Those were the Durban Transport Department buses. The Public utility Corporation of Johannesburg took over and people were very happy.
Virginity testing was regarded as a protection of girls from township boys. Testors were women from rural areas whom at first came for visits and afterwards settled in Kwa Mashu on permanent basis.

2.3 HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF KWA MASHU FROM 1978 - 2000

In May 1979, Cosas was formed as a student movement after SAM had been banned in October 1977. Cosas represented black, coloured and Indian school pupils in the tradition of black consciousness. It's primary aim was to fight for compulsory, free and democratic education in a democratic society. (Booth, D, G 1987:164)

From 1979 the following facilities were available to Kwa Mashu residents:

2.3.1. RECREATION

11 soccer fields, 5 junior soccer fields, 3 netball fields, 2 swimming pools, 5 halls, 1 cinema, 6 tennis courts, 1 tribal dancing ground, 2 stadia (holding 30 000 spectators) 2 playgrounds. At that time there were no libraries or parks.

2.3.2. OTHER FACILITIES

2.3.2.1 SCHOOLS

36 schools (3 of which were Senior Secondary) 376 classrooms, 418 teachers and 20 365 pupils, 5 clinics, 12 crèches, 48 churches, 1 youth centre.

2.3.2.2 BUSINESS

The following businesses were licensed. 40 hawkers, 32 painters, 26 general dealers, 20 butcheries, 14 tinkers, building contractors and bricklayers, 37 taxi operators, 27 market stalls, 19 casual domestic, 11 fresh produce dealers, 7 dry cleaners, 1 undertaker, 1 scrap metal, 8 beer halls and liquor outlets, 7 cartage contractors, 4 driving schools, 4 tailors, dressmakers, 3 book-keepers/attorneys, 3 wood and coal, tea room/ fresh produce, 1 bottle and bone, 7 rating houses, 6 shoemakers, 3 herbalists, 4 hairdressers, 3 medical practitioners and 4 bottle stores. (South African Institute of Relations Natal Region: Kwa Mashu-A black Township Information Sheet No 2/1979)

In 13 December 1982 the Public Utility Transport Company (Putco) increased its number of buses by 13 percent. Its commuters boycotted it. The DTMB too had increased their fares by 12.5 percent. On 13 December 90 buses were stoned in Kwa Mashu, Ntuzuma and Inanda areas. (Booth: 1987:186)

Most of the youth in peri-urban townships were under the United Democratic Front (UDF) which is an affiliate of ANC against Inkatha Freedom Party (IFP). Boycotts in Kwa Mashu in 1980 started after the youth fought the security forces and Inkatha-backed vigilantes for the first time. In Stollers terms, I was an insider as I was doing grade 12 that year and my school at Kwa Mashu was one of the schools which had boycotting children. The police dispersed us with teargas. Other kids were killed, other classmates who were in front had to hide themselves because they were threatened to be arrested. For the whole year there was no proper education. All other townships like Lamont, Umlazi, Chesterville etc. were disturbed (Booth: 1989:200) states. Those pupils in Kwa Mashu returned to school at the beginning of the third term.

From 1979 many facilities were available in Kwa Mashu, like swimming pool, soccer field, cinemas, etc. The focus then diminished from virginity testing and it was stolen by those facilities. Parents including mothers had to go to work because of the cost of living of the time. The housing rentals were high for the fathers’ wages, which compelled the mothers to work too in order to help their husbands. So the mothers or testors had not sufficient time to conduct virginity testing. Lastly, very few individuals practiced it.
At present, on top of the facilities mentioned earlier, there are 2 libraries, chemists are enshrined in the other facilities like general dealers. KwaMashu inhabitants face violence and crime, which is rape, burglary, car hijacking, pick pocketing etc. KwaMashu commuters feel that the facilities they have are not enough to stop their children in engaging themselves in different kinds of delinquencies.

In 1997 Andile Gumede revived the practice because of teenage pregnancies, HIV/AIDS, rape and child abuse. Another motive, which brought the ritual back, is the Black Government, which came to power. People saw the need to go back to their roots.
CHAPTER 3

LITERATURE REVIEW.

In this chapter I will look at the global and local incidence of virginity testing and identify its theoretical underpinnings in terms of selected studies dealing with the topic, their relevance for my study. I will look at published and unpublished works, articles rendered in conferences and newspapers.

3.1. LITERATURE ON GLOBAL AND LOCAL INCIDENCE OF UKUHLOLWA KWEZINTOMBI RITUAL.

3.1.1. BOOKS AND THESIS

Christians believe that a human body is a temple of God. The Bible too emphasizes the importance of being "mombi ino" before tying the wedding knot. Deuteronomy 22: 13-17. says:

"If any man takes a wife and goes in to her and detests her, and charges her with shameful conduct, and brings a bad name on her, and says, "I took this woman, and when I came to her I found she was not a virgin." Then the father and the mother of the young woman shall take and bring out the evidence of the young woman's virginity to the elders of the city at the gate. And the young woman’s father shall say to the elders; I gave my daughter to this man as wife and he detests her. Now he has charged her with shameful conduct, saying, ‘I found your daughter was virgin,’ and yet these are the evidence of my daughter’s virginity, and they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city."

In Krige E. J. (1965) we find that Zulu mothers used regularly to examine their girl’s pudenda by way of supervision against defloration. The girls would not eat meat at the wedding of a seduced girl, that meat is said to be unclean. This implies that non-virginity meant isolation by both sexes of the community.
Scott, G. R. (1953) states that in ancient Greece it was customary for the godfather and godmother of the bridegroom to satisfy themselves as to the virginity of the bride, and announce their satisfaction to those awaiting the news.

In reference to the marriage rites the Mandingoes in the interior of Africa says: -

"The new married couple are always disturbed toward morning by the woman, who assemble to inspect the nuptial sheet and dance around it. This ceremony is thought to be indispensable nor is the marriage considered valid without it."

The fact that virginity has, in so many countries, been regarded highly has led to attempts being made at simulation or restoration. These measures usually take the form of tightening up the relaxed vaginal walls by the application of astringent lotions or surgical restoration of vaginal conditions by suturing. (Scott, G.R (1953:34-35).

Paige, K.E.(1983:157) states that virginity tests at marriage are a particularly crucial test, if a daughter proves to be a virgin, her family retains its honor, but if she fails her family is shamed and its fragmentation becomes a real possibility. This means that keeping virginity is not only rewarding to a girl but also to her parents.

Around 1960 “Ukuholwa kwezinombi was conducted by the old women. The work of Brindley (1982) has been observed concerning this issue. She states that the King would order the old women of the tribe to examine the equivalent age-grade of girls to verify their virginity. This is witnessed by the interviewee Po-l when she states: -

“Kwahlolwa umuntu osemdala ongasayi esikhathini”. (Testing was done by an old person who had reached menopause),

3.1.2. CONFERENCE PRESENTATIONS.

Provincial Conference on virginity testing 12-14 June 2000 by Lissan T J Mtalane. It is said that virginity testing procedure starts before the girl reaches puberty. The girl lies down on her back, knees drawn up, heels together and separates her knees wide apart, to expose the vestibule to see whether the hymen is still intact.

In the paper presented by Suzanne Leclerc Madlala at the University of Natal on (05/07/2000) she states that contemporary virginity testing events take place in a wide variety of settings that range from the privacy of the family home, the kraal of the village, school halls, community centres or large, public sport stadiums. Again in the Mail and Guardian of December 10 to 16 of 1999, Madlala asserts that virginity testing has struck a sensitive cultural chord, with some people even arguing it to be a sort of “cultural right,” Her views reveal debatable issues regarding virginity testing.

T.S.C. Magwaza in her article: A Re- thought on the resurgence of the Zulu cultural customs (1999) states that the starting period of virginity testing is determined by receiving of the menses by a girl, maintaining that the testing was done to prevent crisis like pregnancies.

3.1.3. NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES.

In the “YOU” Magazine of 14 September 2000 Dr. Willie Botha of the Dutch Reformed Church says that although it is difficult for young people but he feels that it is necessary to adhere to the Bible viewpoints that sex is meant only for marriage.

In November 2000 Bona magazine there is a debate on the ritual. Andile, the recent founder of virginity testing, is blaming the Gender Commission as they feel that virginity testing is a violation of children’s rights. Andile Gumede feels that virginity testing as a traditional custom must be continued, as it will reveal the sexual abuse of children.

The Daily News of 23 August 2000 has also contributed in reporting about the topic. It states that an old Zulu tradition is enjoying new popularity. The tests were conducted by the elderly woman of the neighborhood, who broke the early Saturday morning cold in Pietermaritzburg for the practice. They hope it will drastically reduce high levels of sexually transmitted diseases and unwanted pregnancies.

In the Daily News of the 30 May 2000, there was a comment on ukuhlo lw a kwezintombi. The comment was made by Phumelele Ntombela-Nzimande on the conference of the Gender Equality in partnership with the Human Rights Commission. The two constitutional bodies felt that, that was a complex issue that could not be left to a school debate-like level.

3.2. LITERATURE REVEALING THE THEORETICAL UNDERPINNING OF THE PRACTICE OF UKUHLOLWA KWEZINTOMBI RITUAL

To understand ukuhlo lw a kwezintombi (virginity testing) in KwaMashu, one should study the assumptions, thought meanings, feelings, beliefs, customs and historical background of the people who practice it. Ukuhlo lw a kwezintombi is an oral ritual within Zulu traditions, which is passed from generations to generations. The theoretical underpinnings should cater for:

- The way in which the ritual establishes identity, both at the level of the group and of the individual concerned,

- The connection between the identity of the group as a whole and the sense of being each individual within the group.
Eclectically use of literature will take place in order to look at the above aims and purposes.

- Jousse (1997) gives the theory of microscopic and macroscopic geste” in reflective practice. He proposes that human behavior is observable from two angles that, is, those of the macroscopic observer is the audience-observer while the microscopic observer is the performer observer. In this study the exploration of the macroscopic and microscopic gestes of the testors and testees will be involved in ukuholwa kwezinombi (virginity testing) through a process of interviews.

- In Stoller’s terms (Sensus Schoarship 1996) valid scholarly observation is largely determined but the degree of implication of the scholar, that is, whether the scholar has an informed insider view of the issue being investigated qualify as an implicated scholar in that I am a Zulu woman who have stayed in the place of research for twenty four years and have experienced ukuholwa kwezinombi as a testee.

As “ukuholwa kwezinombi” is an oral tradition, Finnegam (1992) feels that the word “tradition) is used variously of culture as a whole, any established way of doing things whether or not of any antiquity, the process of handing down practices, ideas or values, the products so handed down, sometimes with the connotation of being “old” or having arisen in some “natural” and non polemical way. The addition of “oral” often implies that the traditional question is in some way 1) verbal or 2) non-written, sometimes also or alternatively belonging to the people or the “folk”, usually with the connotation of non-educated, non elite and or 4) fundamental and valued, of ten supposedly transmitted over generations, perhaps by the community or folk rather than conscious individual action.

Seligman (1989) differentiates between oral tradition and oral history. He feels that oral tradition includes traditions of a people or a tribe that is transmitted to future generations via various means. Likewise ukuhloiswa kwezintombi is practiced by the Zulus and the knowledge of testing is passed from generation to generation. On the other hand he sees oral history as a subject dealing mainly with the present and the recent past, encompassing a relatively short span of time. Although ukuhloiswa kwezintombi started in the far past it has been practiced in the recent past and present.

I also adopt the theory of Vansina (1985) as a modification theory. Ukuhloiswa kwezintombi is a resurging practice and it is taking place within a changing society, due to certain factors surrounding it. Vansina states that traditions change and the motivation for the tradition changes. Motivation for ukuhloiswa kwezintombi has changed from status, lobola etc. to health (HIV/Aids) and crime, which is rape.
CHAPTER 4

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

In this research of trends, modifications and motivations for ukuhloolwa kwezintombi (virginity testing) among the Zulus in the KwaMashu district, qualitative methods of observation and interviewing were sources used to gather information.

4.1. DATA COLLECTION

Data was gathered through observations and by interviewing women who have conducted virginity testing from 1960 including those who are currently conducting it, and those that have been tested around those years and currently. A sample of non-participants was also chosen. There are those that are not taking part in virginity testing but who are for its sustenance and continuity, including men and those that are not taking part too but who are against the practice of ritual.

Those primary sources were required to share their experiences on:-

(i) What were / are the trends of virginity testing from 1960 to 2000.

(ii) What are the modifications of virginity testing compared to its traditional performance.

(iii) What motivated the testors and testees to engage themselves in virginity testing in the past forty years and present years.

(iv) How has the status of a virgin changed currently compared to the past.

(v) What impact are the changing motivations for ukuhloolwa kwezintombi in respect of traditional values to rituals.
4.2. TYPES OF SOURCES

The sources of information used consisted of primary sources, that is, people interviewed, observations and myself as a primary source because of my experience in the ritual as a testee, and secondary sources. Secondary sources included journals, conference papers, newspapers, theses, local and international publications and unpublished documents.

A search from the computer was undertaken with the assistance of subject librarian, tracking the research cited on the topic. The research analyst was given the key terms such as virginity, Zulu rituals, adolescent girls, AIDS, testing, traditional customs, KwaZulu Natal, rural areas, teenage pregnancy, sexual behaviour. A printout was obtained and a selection of pertinent sections were read for information and further sources which were then followed up. Index cards were used to record the bibliographic citations and were chronologically arranged. A short analysis of each source relevant to the problem noted down on note cards using phrases, abbreviation and quotation marks with page numbers.

By providing with an analysis of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi ritual among the Zulu in Kwa Mashu district, it is believed that the study will help us to understand the practice of those people who are still maintaining the ritual. The sources were compared and contrasted as to the way they contributed or failed to contribute to the study.

4.3 THE INTERVIEW SCHEDULE

The schedule for interviews was 1 April to 30 May 2000. Due to the time constraints there was no fixed time of the interviews. The availability and the flexibility of the interviewees determined the interviewing time. The official ritual performance took place once a month in Kwa Mashu sports ground by the name of Engomeni. That is when I could make an appointment with the testors and testees to interview them.

4.4. CONDUCTING AND RECORDING THE INTERVIEWS

The interviews took place in the place of the interviewee or the venue preferred by the interviewee. The question and answer method usually took place and notes were taken. I had questions prepared beforehand but at times I was forced to divert from fixed questions. The type of question to be asked was sometimes determined by the nature of the interviewee, that is, was it a man: a testor, a non-participant who is for or against the practice etc. For example; I could not ask the man this question “How do you test them”. At times, the following question to be asked was determined by the answer given in the previous question.

With the permission of the interviewee a tape recorder was used. The photos were taken with the permission of the testee, sometimes during the performance of the ritual. The non-participants had also to be interviewed in order to balance the data gathered and to hear more about the ritual. The background information of the interviewee was recorded in order to analyze his/her responses in conjunction with his or her background information.

The interviews were conducted and recorded in Zulu, but a translation to English for each question and its response was made for the accessibility of non-Zulu speakers.

4.5. ANALYSIS AND SYNTHESIS OF DATA

After the data had been collected it was analyzed and synthesized. The bits and pieces of it were put together. It was compared and contrasted with the information found in the books and other relevant sources. The data that was found useful was the one that would answer the key questions asked before. The data was analyzed to provide an understanding of ukuhloha kwezintombi within the parameters of its trends, modification and motivation.

4.6. VIEWS OF THE PRIMARY SOURCES.

Most of the informants are eager to revive and restore the ritual feeling that it is culturally right. African renaissance is reminding people to go back to their roots. (Po-1) emphasizes the importance of virginity. If a girl is deflowered she cannot participate in other joyous activities of the community. This informant (Po-1) states that if the girl is already deflowered the reed splits in the middle. This point evokes that virginity is a certain status in a girl; the parents and the community. Deflowered girls bring expenses to their families, as they have to pay penalties as Po-3 states that a deflowered girl had to pay two cows, one for the family and one for the king and a goat to cleanse the girls.

Most of them agree that virginity testing is one of the ways of preventing HIV/AIDS. When the girl abstains from sex she cannot acquire sexual transmitted diseases unless the child was born with the disease as Na-3 tells that testing is done to prevent HIV/AIDS.

As these kids tend to keep quiet after ukuhluwaxezwa (abused). Testors believe that testing helps to trace back the date of abuse using virginity testing records.

The eleventh cow (inkomo kamama) was a big motive behind virginity testing in the sense that it was not paid for a non-virgin. Pe-3 states

"umqboyiso wawungakhishwa (kongasentombi)" (the eleventh cow was not paid for the deflowered girl).

Most of the non-participants show dissatisfaction regarding the practice of ritual. Na-2 feels that the practice invites crime, that is, rapists as it now lacks secrecy as the girls get certificates, broadcasted in the radios, appear in newspapers and magazines. Na-3 feels that virginity testing violates the rights of children that is, the right of privacy. Na-3 has a cconcern about inadequate knowledge of the testors, stating that her neighbor's child became pregnant and was always claimed to be full during all testing sessions.

The aim of this research is to reveal the truths about its performance and pave the way for further study for other researchers.

4.7. LIMITATIONS OF THE STUDY

This study is limited to the people of KwaMashu. The sample was chosen from different angles of the township. I chose sixteen interviewees, four testors, ages ranging from forty two to seventy one, six testees, ages ranging from eight to thirty six, non participants who favors virginity testing with ages ranging from forty two to forty five and non-participants who are against virginity testing with ages ranging from thirty nine to forty four. Because of the given scope, direction and time limit I could only come with what I came with. This document is compiled with the information and data collected from my honorable interviewees and information from my personal experience of the ritual.

4.7.1. TIME FRAME

As a worker; a mother and a wife given a restricted time frame to finish my academic work; was difficult for me. The free time for me was not a free time for my interviewee.
For example, as I finish work at 3pm, my interviewee might finish at 6pm. So I should be flexible and travel at night because the interviewee would come home and finish his/ her duties first before attending me. Some would allow me to interview them during their short break times and I should make another appointment to finish my interview.
4.7.2. LACK OF TRUST.

As S.A is full of crime it is difficult to trust anybody. I should try to convince my interviewee of my innocence. Others think that you want to remove them from political parties of their interests and involve them in the others they dislike. When I asked for a background information, when I was leaving one said "You mustn’t write my name in the _____" stating a political organization. Others think that you would make money using their names.

4.7.3. SECRECY.

"Ukhlolwa kwezintombi" is considered by some people as an unethical practice that degrades female dignity. For others it was not easy to tell about the ritual. Even during observations they use to question me of my intentions. Very few permitted me to use the tape recorder. As the ritual is surrounded by taboos, informants did not prefer group interviews in order to talk freely.

I had great difficulty in interviewing children. Some were very shy to talk about it.
CHAPTER 5

ZULU COSMOLOGY

The Zulu people, like any other cultural group have their own beliefs that are peculiar to them. These beliefs drive them to perform certain rituals and traditional customs, which they believe without performing and honoring them, things might go wrong.

5.1. ANCESTRAL BELIEF

Zulu people believe in their ancestors. They believe that their ancestors are always with them and they should listen to their commands. Ancestral belief goes hand in hand with religion.

The ancestors are looked upon as the source from which help and guidance can be found. Help and guidance can be achieved after appropriate sacrificial offerings. They also believe on the supernatural being “UNKULUNKULU who is (a creator of everything on earth). The Zulus believe that human beings have a body (umzimba), inggaendo (brain) understanding) and the isithunzi (shadow, personality). They believe that isithunzi becomes the ancestral spirit after death, that is, after the ukubuyisa has been performed, during which the spirit is brought back home. The Zulus distinguish two classes of sacrifice. The thanks giving (ukubonga) which takes place when something good has come about and the (ukuthetha), a scolding sacrifice which take place when things seem to go wrong and the individual feels persecuted. Sacrifices are usually of cattle or goats and are performed according to ritual and the strict observation of procedure and protocol, as if these are not followed the sacrifice may bring no benefits and could be dangerous. (Magubane, P.1998: 62).
It is through the fear of ancestors that even today they have decided to revive the isiko lokuhloha kwezinombi (virginity testing ritual). They know that if the girl has restored virginity she definitely qualifies to dance and celebrate in the reed ceremony. As Nomkhubulwane is an ancestral entity, girls are tested in order to try and qualify for (Nomkhubulwane) status. Berglund, A (1976) states that the Princess (Nomkhubulwane) is looked upon as being a virgin. She is closely related to the young marriageable, well as to fertility, mankind, animals and groups.

5.2. THE EXTENDED MEN POWER AND RIGHTS

WOMAN POWER AND RIGHTS

The Zulus believe that men have power over women. Men dominate women. Even if a property belongs to a woman but it is taken as of a man. Magubane, (1976:61) says:-

"Each umuzi was under the control of the umnumzane (household head) who was responsible for keeping order and dealing with any domestic or local disputes that might arise.

The fact that chastity is mostly expected from females is derived from men's power over women. It is of late that women have rights. Traditionally it was a matter of give and take in terms of men and women respectively.

Rosaldo, M, et al 1974: are also of this view that women have a subordinate power compared to men. They state that all contemporary societies are to some extent male dominated and although the degree and expression of female subordination vary greatly, sexual asymmetry is presently a universal fact of human social life. This is due to the belief that a woman’s body seems to doom her to mere production of life, on the other hand, lacking natural creative function, the man assist his creativity externally through the medium of technology and symbols. He creates relatively lasting, eternal, transcendent objects, while the woman creates only perishable -human beings (Rosaldo M, et al (1974:75).

Traditionally men were allowed to many lovers or wives. To women, having many lovers was not allowed and was a disgrace. A male person with many lovers had a good name "isoka" a good signs of becoming a true umnumzane (a real Zulu man) whereas a woman with more than one lover was given a very negative name "isifebe" a worthless woman. Even today that perception is still preserved in Zulu minds and beliefs. This perception has been carried over to the present era where Aids epidemic is uncontrollable. Women are taken as incubators of HIV/AIDS. That is why the focus of virginity testing is on women. Suzanne Leclerc Madlala in a paper presented on 15/07/2000 talk about this Zulu belief. She states: -

The term "isoka" is used to describe such a young man and to be called an "isoka" status in one's youth is often said to be part of the preparation for manhood, part of the process of becoming a umnumzane, a real Zulu Man.

However, the perception that girls today are doing just like the boys, striving to be amasoka by chasing and acquiring many boyfriends, is the antithesis of proper Zulu girlhood and preparation for womanhood. For the cultural ideas are one of a demure, soft-spoken woman who serves her husband, her children and her in-laws.

5.3. WOMEN AS A PRIMARY FOCUS

There is a belief among the Zulus that the status of the home is brought up or down by a woman. As I have mentioned under power and right that a man could have many lovers but the woman is prohibited. When a woman is doing like wise (having more than one lover) she is said to destroy the homestead (ubulala umuzi). Even when the kids are raised, there is a great focus on the upbringing of a girl compared to that of a boy.
Umhlonanye (puberty rites) are done for a girl. Then afterwards the girl has to emula (come of age) to show the community that the girl is marriageable and then the girl undergo marriage. Keeping virginity is focused on girls to be exemplary to their kids as the duty of taking care of the kids was traditionally for them. When the child is born the first person to embrace him or her is the mother. Women are regarded as the flowers of the nation. Virginity testing is conducted to safeguard these flowers to beautify the nation.

There are duties that man cannot perform, like examining girl’s virginity. Women have a task of teaching kids from childhood to adulthood the manners and the proper ways to behave in order to become full-fledged members of the culture.

5.4. OWNERSHIP BELIEF

The Zulus believe in the importance of ownership, especially the livestock. Virginity testing was primarily conducted in order to gain many cattle in the form of lobola. A deflowered girl could not be a source of eleven cows which is a complete number of cows expected for lobola. This shows that there was a great pride and status in having a big herd of cattle. Magubane, PI (1998) states that each umuzi had its own cattle and supply of milk.

The belief of ownership among traditional Zulu led the fathers to the extent of choosing marriage partners for their daughters. A daughter was compelled to marry a man he disliked because that man had a large herd of cattle. In order to get these cattle they had to protect their daughter’s sexual reputation. Paige, K.E (1983:157) states that when daughters as well as sons inherit property, attempts are made to exert maximum control over the marriage partner, since there is always the possibility that the husband family may usurp that property, thereby fragmenting the patrimonial estate. Even Na-3 emphasises that the primary aim of virginity testing was to get many cows. (igugu cuwukuthola izinkomo eziningi)

5.5. BELIEF IN WITCHCRAFT AND MEDICINE

The Zulu believe in witchcraft and curing medicines. When one is ill or the member of the family is ill one will think someone is (nyathakathwa) sent with evil spirits. There is a distinction between the (inyanga yokwelapha) herbalist who administer medicines made from plants and animals, and the (inyanga yokubhula) who smells out or divines the cause of complaints by using bones, shells, seeds and other artifacts.

Magubane P.l (1998) identifies other two categories of diviners: the isangoma, which is a liaison who can make contact with the ancestral spirits and prescribe medicines according to their dictates which are obtained from inyanga yokubhula. The other category is isanusi, which is a diviner capable of “smelling out” sorcerers and other evil doers.

Traditionally medicine people occupied a very high status in the community.

Currently, although Zulus are mingled within a cosmopolitan society, they still believe in Zulu medicine and witchcraft. When Pe-4 was asked, “what scared you when you were about to be tested?” She replied:

“Ngiye ngizwe kuthiwa abanye boniwa yisilwane, ngizitshele ukuthi nami sizongona bese kuthiwa angiziphethe kahle”. (I sometimes hear that virginity is sometimes destroyed by evil spirits (utikoloshe), so I fear that it might destroy mine and then be misjudged and found not a virgin)
Bryant, AT (1966) states:

"For all urethra and vaginal discharges or sores of a generally venereal nature, as in gonorrhea or glee (uGluza, iKililabhu, iDilophu, or iQonda), a large pill is made of the pounded leaves of the uZipho, which is then thrust into the vagina or penis, and allowed to remain"

The power of the diviners is believed to be derived from the ancestors. They should keep a constant touch with the ancestors and make sacrifices to the spirits to make their revelation clear.

5.6. BELIEF IN MUSIC AND DANCE

Music and dance accompany each and every occasion or celebrity among the Zulu. Music and dance has traditionally formed an important part in Zulu life. Dancing and singing accompanied by sometimes drum forms the central core of each and every event, either a sad or a joyous one.

The common drum of the Zulu is “isigubhu” which is made by stretching a piece of goatskin over the mouth of a large earthen pot (imbiza) and played by tapping with the hand or sticks. The puberty rites ceremonies, emula ceremonies, umshado ceremonies etc. are all accompanied by music and dancing. The tone of music and dance differs depending on the occasion which is taking place in a particular moment. For example the tone in a marriage song differs from the tone of a death song.

Magubane P (1998) is of this opinion when he states that dance has always been important in maintaining a sense of group solidarity, particularly during times of stress, joy and change. That is why songs and dances also accompany virginity testing ritual. These takes place before or after virginity testing. For example: Awe kanjani amabele ejongosi okisho ukuthi seliphuma kanjena. (How did the breast of a teenager fell, it means she has started bad ways).
CHAPTER 6

TRENDS OF VIRGINITY TESTING AMONG THE ZULU IN KWAMASHU DISTRICT OF KWAZULU NATAL FROM 1960-2000

Virginity testing refers to the practice and process of inspecting girls to determine if they are still virgins. The girl has to lie down on her back, knees are drawn up, and heels together and the knees are wide apart, then the vestibule is exposed to check whether the hymen is still intact. This ritual is as old as mankind among the Zulus in KwaZulu Natal. Among oral traditions that were practiced in Zulu culture, virginity testing was also of valuable importance. White, (1978:141) sees culture or civilization as that complex whole which includes knowledge, belief, art, law, morals, custom and any other capabilities and habits acquired by man as a member of society. This implies that ukuhlotha kwezintombi ritual belongs to the Zulu society not to an individual person.

6.1 VIRGINITY TESTING FROM 1960-1978

The inhabitants of Kwa Mashu were families from Cator Manor who moved in in 1960. Other inhabitants were men from rural areas of KwaZulu Natal who moved in for industrial purposes. Women from rural areas had to come to visit their husbands although action would be taken against a native that was illegally in an urban area as Natal Mercury for 1959 stated. These women from rural areas had knowledge of virginity testing. They had to use their knowledge of the past to examine virginity of the girls who were coming from Cator Manor and their girls who later followed their parents for schooling purposes. Those mothers were scared that the girls might lose their virginity because of the area, that is, township life.
6.1.1 THE TESTEES

Forty years ago virginity testing did not only imply the actual performance of looking at the girl’s vagina. It also included mostly looking at certain parts of a girl’s body. The muscle tone of a virgin is taut. Po-3 is of this opinion when she states:

Umzimba nyanqina. Iniinyaba iyathula iqine enye enya kweziixo. Uma engasemwomzi iyadonseka. Izihlati ziyezla. Zingabe zisaqumba. Idolo liyanqina (The body becomes firm. The stretch marks behind the knees becomes firm. If she is no longer a virgin, the stretch marks looks bad. The cheeks lose their boldness. The knees on top are firm (when she is still a virgin).

Others add to this by stating that the stomach of a virgin is tight and high, the buttocks are held high and not flabby. The breasts are firm and abdomen is flat and taut.

Through ukushikila (pulling up the skirts and shake the buttocks) old ladies could easily see whether a girl was a virgin or not. Msimang, (1975; 226) when commenting about the body look of a virgin, states;

Intombazane enezitho ezilengayo namabele asewile kwakube akuseniombi yalutho. (A girl with flabby legs and breasts was worthless woman)

The physical performance of virginity testing (touching the girls’ genitals to check whether the hymen was still intact) was a secondary option. It had motives behind, which will be dealt with in depth under ‘Motivations of virginity testing’. Restoring virginity until marriage was highly regarded and it was a socially regulated norm. Even on a wedding eve; virginity testing was done to ensure that the grooms were not losing their cattle. In this regard Paige, 1983; 157 states

“Virginity tests at marriage are a particular crucial test; if a daughter proves to be a virgin, her family retains its honor, but if she fails her family is shamed and its fragmentation becomes a real possibility”
The girl’s genitals were referred to as inkomo kamama, ingquthu or umqholiso (the eleventh cows). This means that maintaining virginity, beside restoring the pride of the girl concerned, the parents and the community, its motive was to qualify for eleventh cow to be paid by the groom’s family. If the girl was deflowered, the eleventh cow was deducted from lobola. Umqholiso or ingquthu refers to the woman’s genitals that were split to bore the girl. Krige, (1965:131) states:-

To the mother of the girl must always be given the inqguthu beast, for looking after her daughter and for her virginity.

A testee was a person who had already chosen a future husband. There was no need to examine a teenager without a lover. No girl was tested before puberty. Po-3 was twenty-three (23) years old when she was tested for the first time. It was three months before she got married. Girls were also tested if one or the regiment was insulted of being umfazi or abafazi (a worthless woman/women respectively). This was done to clear the girl or girls names. If the girls were still pure normally the insulter had to pay the cow and a goat as a penalty to cleanse the girls. If the insulted girl was already deflowered, her parents had to pay two cows, one to cleanse the King’s palace and one to cleanse the girls. Another informant mentioned that in rural areas if the boyfriend or lover had forced penetration and the girl reveals there and there, the girl’s family had the right to go to the boy’s home and choose two cows and a goat from the cattle byre. One cow was for the King, one for the mother (umqholiso) and the goat to cleanse the girls. The girls had to cleanse themselves with the waste from the offal (umswani) after tearing the goat with their hands (Po-1).

Another way used for chastity control was ukusoma. This was practiced by lovers before marriage. It is an intracrural sexual activity that does not include penetration. The girl holds her thighs tightly together to give sexual pleasure to a man. This was socially suitable. Vilakazi, (1962:51) further states that soma is definitely not coition and that traditionally the soma visit by the lover follows a week after the qoma ceremony.

6.1.2 THE ROLE OF THE AMAQHIKIZA

It was the responsibility of the iqhikiza to see to it that girls under her regiment keep their virginity. (Krige, 1977; 104) sees amaqhikiza as the older girls who already have sweethearts. They were the only ones who gave permission to amatshishi (uncommitted young girls) to answer boys who are proposing for love. An intandi had to take place before the girls are jutshwa. An intandi was a meeting where the permission of girls to answer the wooers and to choose lovers was discussed. The jutshwa ceremony was where the amatshishi (ferminity unfolding period) were given permission to answer the wooers by the iqhikiza. (Krige, 1977:104)

It was the right of the amaqhikiza to scold and reprimand a girl who practiced ukisoma over the genitals. This was called ukugudla. In this regard (Po-4) states:

_Uma egudlwa wayethethiswa, kwakubonakala ngemihuzuko yokungcola._ (If she was doing semi penetrative sexual intercourse, she was scolded, that is seen by friction and it becomes dirty).

Brindley, (1982:93) adds by saying that the male does not penetrate but plays alongside the vagina (_ukugudla_).
6.1.3 THE TESTORS

Ukuhlolwa kwezintombi was conducted by the kings’ wives or any other nominated women who qualified to do so. It should be an old person who had reached menopause. It should also be a person who was no longer engaging herself in sexual practices. Brindley, (1982; 90) supports this when she mentions that prior to the king granting regiments the freedom to marry he would order the old women of the tribe to examine the equivalent age-grade of the girls to verify their virginity. Women who were examined as young women conducted virginity testing. They had the experience in the field. Po-I is of this opinion when she states:

Nami ngangihlolwa, ulwazi kuyadlulise kwabalol1elayo... umuntu omdala akasenaman yala, uma esaya oconsini ohlolayo usike eyilinga nengane ayihlolayo ukuba nayo ifune ukuya ocamsini. (I was also tested, the knowledge is passed on to the successors... an old person is pure, when the testor still visits her husband sexually, she is tempting the girl to also have lust for sex.)

The actual performance of the test included inter alia, putting down the grass mat on a steep hill and checking whether the hymen was still intact. The lower abdomen was always on the upper side for the checking to be easy. When the girl was found a virgin, the testors used to ululate, kiss the girl on top of the vagina and advised the girl to further restore her virginity. It was a disgrace if the girl was found deflowered. The testors used to spit over the girl’s genitals and report to the other testors and the mother of the girl about the results.

The testors, the iqhikiza, and whole community had to make sure that the virginity of the ‘flowers of the nation’ (girls) is restored. Deflowered girls would not participate in the reed ceremony. The reed ceremony is a yearly customary event, which usually takes place in spring in the king’s palace. The girls had to cut their reeds in the afternoon of the day preceding the ceremony. The reed of a virgin remains fresh and straight until the next day. The reed of a non-virgin bends or splits apart. In contemporary societies, during this ceremony the girls dance, sing and each carry a reed, showing off their breasts, buttocks and abdomen. Sometimes the king chooses his future wife from these virgin girls. Po-1 states that the king used to say to his inceku (helper): hamba nyongishayela ihawu laphaya 'inceku bese ithatha umhlanga entombini. (Go and beat the shield there for me, meaning go and fetch that girl for me, then the helper would take away the reed from the girl).

6.1.4 THE TESTING PLACE

Ukuhlo/wa kwezintombi usually took place in the King’s palace. The permission and the date of the testing was granted by the King. The girl’s relatives were allowed to conduct occasional virginity testing driven by certain motives and to prepare the girl for the official testing which was done or conducted in the King’s palace. The non official one was done outside the house in a hidden place. Secrecy of the ritual was highly regarded. The relatives were mostly concerned with full lobola. The full lobola comprises of eleven cows with inkomo kamama (eleventh cow). Krige 1977:121 sees ilobola as the means whereby the loss of the girl’s people is in some measure compensated for.

6.2 VIRGINITY TESTING FROM 1979-1996

(THE PERIOD OF SILENCE)

From 1979 KwaMashu was well equipped with facilities the youth liked most. There were swimming pools, tennis courts, cinemas etc., as very few houses had televisions to view the films. Youth formed student movements like Cosas.
There was a political youth movement which was called 'United Democratic Front (UDF) which was an affiliate of African National Congress (ANC). Most youth of KwaMashu joined that political movement to fight for their rights like free education.

Then the focus shifted from virginity testing to the environment of the time. That is why I call this as a period of silence. It doesn’t mean that there was no testing at all. Very few individuals were tested in KwaMashu and others were tested in their rural areas during visits there.

Housing rentals were high for the income of the time. Transport fares were becoming higher and higher. Food was a problem as there were not enough plots to plant the crops to eat like in the rural areas. Women were then forced to seek employment in order to supplement the salaries of their husbands to accommodate the cost of living of the time. Then slowly, slowly virginity testing lacked attention in the testors’ minds. Here we witness the impact of western civilization and acculturation on the demise of ukuhlolwa kwezintoombi.

6.3 VIRGINITY TESTING FROM 1997-2000

In 1997 we witnessed the resurgence of the practice which is now coming back for different reasons from those of forty years ago. That is why Vansina (1985:157) proposes that tradition mirror society changes, so both tradition modify. Forty years ago the motive behind ukuhlolwa kwezintoombi was status and lobola especially the eleventh cow. Nowadays the practice has a benefit that of guarding against HIV/Aids as well as deciphering sexual abuses and teenage pregnancies.
6.3.1 HOW DID THE PRACTICE RE-EMERGE

Andile Gumede revived the practice of ukuhlolwa kwezintombi in 1997 under the regimental name "Isivivane Samasiko". She believed that the revival of dormant Zulu customs like virginity testing as a practical way to reclaim elements of culture that may help to solve modern day problems. The indicator S.A. (Vol. 15 no3) by Georgina Hamilton mentioned that Andile Gumede knew about virginity testing when she was seven years old. Her grandmother used to take her aunt behind the house to inspect her. In 1993 she was working in the Magistrate's Court in a rural area of KwaZulu Natal. She realized that most teenagers who came for identification documents did not know their fathers but have mothers only. This was a big motivation for her to revive the ritual. She realized that black people have children but no families.

She regarded "praise" as an essential factor. After a girl is found "full" she will be praised and thus encouraged to keep virginity. According to her, certificates are a form of praising the girls. She revived the ritual under the name of Nomkhubulwane.

6.3.2 THE TESTEES.

The interviewees reveal that the age of the testees range from five to twenty five years of age. The reason for testing young girls as early five years old is that they don't tell when they have been sexually abused. Another reason for testing early ages is that nowadays girls long for sex very early. Po-3 states: -

> Ukuze nesiganga isheshe ibonakale (so that the girl who is sexually misbehaving is seen promptly.)

Amaqhikiza are no longer there to decide whether the girl is ready for love life or not. A girl has to decide for herself and the influence of the age-mates plays a major role.

Some testees reveal that they are tested weekly, others once in two weeks and others are tested monthly. Other testees mention that they are scared before the tests. Pe-4 mentioned that she was scared before the examination because her friends told her that sometimes evil spirits can deflower a virgin. Some testees carry their notebooks to note down the last day of the test. Testors feel that this way help to trace back the date of abuses if the victim is quiet about it. The testees wear short skirts, others beaded and others are plain. The colour and the make of the testing skirt is determined by the choice of the testor and the place where the group is coming from. The testees form the line, lie down and checked. If she is found a virgin she is patted on the thighs and is dabbed with white clay on the forehead. The testors believe that whiteness shows purity. The non-virgin is dabbed with red clay as a sign of impurity. Then they go to pay fifty cents. Others state that these cents are used to buy soap for the testors, while others state that it is used to transport the testors. At the end of the year the virgins get certificates.

The testing usually starts or ends with singing and dancing. One of the song is:-

_Awe kanjani?_

_Amabel'ejongosi._

_Sekush'ukuthi._

_Seliphuma kanje!_
English version

How did they fall?

The breast of teenager,

It means,

She started bad ways!

Another song is:-

U-Andile siyamazi,

Uhlol; izintombi

Jikelele; jikelele

Jikelele; jikelele

Jikelele; jikelele!

English version

We know Andile

She tests the girls

All over all over

All over all over

All over all over!
6.3.3 THE TESTORS

The age of the current testors ranges from 18 to 71. Pe-2 witnesses this when she mentions that her testor is eighteen years old. KwaMashu current testors, the actual performance of virginity testing takes precedence over looking at the girl’s certain parts of the body to tell whether she has been deflowered or not. Most of the time the latter does not get the focus at all. The girls have to show their genitals to be tested first before it can be seen whether they are still virgins or not.

Some testors lay the grass mats for the testing. Other add the sponge while others add the blanket on top of the sponge. Other testors use one pair of gloves to test all the testees. Others use one pair for each testee. Po-2 states:

Ingane ngayinye inamagloves ayo, ngoba sixhaswe yi Department of Health, (each child has her own pair of gloves because we are sponsored by the Department of Health).

Others do not use the gloves at all. During testing they rarely show dissatisfaction to their testees, when they do they sometimes suggest that the testee should stop using chemical soaps. They sometimes suggest Zulu (muthi) medicine or that the testee should see the doctor.

6.3.4 THE TESTING PLACE

Individual inspection takes place in a girl’s respective home or neighborhood. Most testees mention that the testing usually takes place inside the house. The individual tests which are frequently done prepare the girls for the formal monthly ones. The monthly tests take place in a sports ground where testees and testors from different corners of the township meet.
CHAPTER 7

MODIFICATIONS AND MOTIVATIONS OF THE RITUAL

7.1. HOW HAS THE RITUAL BEEN MODIFIED IN KWAMASHU COMPARED TO ITS TRADITIONAL PERFORMANCE.

Vansina: 1985 proposes that tradition mirror society. Vansina further proposes that as society changes so the traditions change. Traditions about events are maintained because the events they celebrate are thought to be important or significant. Traditionally a selection process starts with eyewitnesses, with performance and contemporary reports. As time goes by the criteria of importance or significance changes, but the selection process continues. The motivation for virginity testing currently differs from that of the past. Among the Zulu the practice of ukuhololwa kwezinombi is centuries old, but its history is one of considerable flux. While the impact of multicultural contact in the early twentieth century led to its near demise, in recent years we have seen its revival in some parts of KwaZulu Natal in general and in KwaMashu district in particular.

7.1.1. AGES OF ABAHLOLWA (TESTEES) AND ABAHLOLI (TESTORS)

In the past only a girl who had chosen a future husband was tested to keep herself pure until marriage. It was also done when a girl or girls had been insulted of being abafazi (a woman who has already engaged herself in sexual practices). A girl was also tested on a wedding eve, so that if she is no longer a virgin the eleventh cow is withdrawn from lobola.
Currently at KwaMashu virginity testing is done among girls as from the age of five years. This is due to uncontrollable crime rate, which is rape and health issues which is H.I.V/AIDS. Most kids keep quiet when they are raped. The records of the testing dates and certificates helps in the sense that you can trace back to the testing date and assume when the victim was raped.

In the past the testers were women who have reached menopause. It was also women who do not visit their husband sexually. They were people who were also tested when they were young and who were trained by their predecessors to do the work. Mostly the kings' wives or any old nominated women who qualified to do the work did it.

Currently at KwaMashu testers' ages range from 18 years of age. Looking at their ages there is no doubt that most of them have not reached menopause they still practice sex. This is believed to be the cause of temptation for most girls. Informants who are against virginity testing doubt if these testers have the adequate potential to do the work.

7.1.2. FREQUENCY OF TESTING

Around 1960 testing was done when there was a need to do so. As I have mentioned earlier, it was conducted among insulted girls, when the girl had chosen a future husband or on the wedding eve. It was also done when the girls were prepared for the reed ceremony. Presently, ukuhlolwa sometimes happen daily or weekly. The girls are tested daily or weekly in their homes or in their neighborhood. The interested parties from different corners of the township practice the formal monthly testing together in the sports ground. It has become a daily bread for the testers and testees.
7.1.3. PLACE OF THE TESTS

Forty years ago, virginity testing for all the girls was done in the king’s palace. Individual testing usually took place outside the home in a hidden place. Currently individual testing takes place inside the houses. The formal testing takes place in the sports ground. In KwaMashu it takes place mostly in Engomeni sports grounds in E Section.

7.1.4. WAY OF TESTING

When you compare virginity testing in the past, you can detect many differences with nowadays testing, like virginity faking, material used for testing, payments and certificates and cleansing of virgins by non virgins.

7.1.4.1. VIRGINITY FAKING

Due to insufficient knowledge most testors of nowadays cannot tell whether a girl is a virgin or not before the test is done. That is why the testees are able to fake virginity before they are tested. Another interviewee said:

"Bafaka i-ayisi balenze iso. (They put ice in the place of the hymen).

The other one said that some testees put meat fat in the place of the hymen. Even if there is no hymen, other testors fear the mothers of the testees and let them pass the test even if they are no longer virgins. Another informant who is against virginity testing said "Enye ingane la ngakwami yakhulelwa kade ihlolwa, kungakaze kuthiwe ayiyona intombi (Another child from my neighborhood fell pregnant and not even once was she accused of not being virgin.

7.1.4.2. MATERIAL USED FOR TESTING

In the past only the grass mat was put down for the testees to lie on. Currently at KwaMashu, they sometimes put the sponge and a blanket, so that the testees can lie on. This is due to acculturation and exposure to modern technology. As Vansina 1985) suggests this mirrors the change in society.

In the past there were less sexual transmitted disease. Most of them were curable unlike nowadays where there is this incurable disease which is HIV/Aids. So currently most testors use gloves when touching the girls’ private parts. Other testors use one pair of gloves for one testee. Others use one pair of gloves for all the testees present on that particular testing day.

In the past the testors could kiss the top of a vagina when the testee was found to be a virgin but because of these incurable diseases, now they pat on the thigh or say it verbally that the girl is a virgin.

7.1.4.3. PAYMENTS AND CERTIFICATES

In the past no money was paid for the test. Nowadays after the test the testee has to proceed to the second line to pay 50 cents. This fifty cents is sometimes used to transport the testors. In the past no certificates were issued for the testees who have passed the virginity test. Currently the girls receive the certificates. The non-participants who are against virginity testing feels that this exposes girls to criminals who have a lust to have sex with virgins. Other people believe that if you have HIV/Aids and have sex with young virgin you become cured. The non-participants who are against virginity are not happy about the certificates, appearance of virgins in the magazines and the announcements in radios.

7.1.4.4 CLEANSING OF VIRGINS BY NON-VIRGINS

Both in the past and present, a girl who is found not to be a virgin had to cleanse the virgins. What differs is the way of doing it. In the past a girl whose virginity has been destroyed had to pay a penalty of two cows to cleanse the King's palace and one to cleanse the girls of the community. Umswani was mixed with water and white bead was added. Affected girls had to cleanse themselves early in the morning in the river.

Currently in KwaMashu a goat is paid as a penalty to cleanse the girls. A silver coin is added in the place of a bead. This cleansing rarely takes place in the river. It usually takes place outside the home of a testor or inside the house. Sometimes this penalty is not paid at all.

7.2. WHAT ARE THE CURRENT MOTIVATIONS OF VIRGINITY TESTING RITUAL IN KWA MASHU TO THE MOTIVATIONS OF THE PAST.

Historically, ukulholwa kwezintombi has always been regarded as a vital social tool to restore a girl's virginity. Paige: 1983 in Menarche states:

...if a daughter proves to be a virgin, her family retains it honor, but if she fails her family is shamed and its fragmentation becomes a real possibility.

Due to acculturation, western civilization, Christianity and other factors, ukulholwa kwezintombi, in the early twentieth century led to its near demise. In recent years, due to certain motivations that I will outline below, the revival of the practice has been seen in some parts of KwaZulu Natal and in KwaMashu district in particular.

7.2.1. MOTIVATIONS OF THE PAST

7.2.1.1. PRIDE

Virginity brought pride to the girl. If a girl has been deflowered virginity goes for good. That is why (ukusa) death is figuratively used for a girl who has lost virginity. Even if a lover would dump a girl and she was still a virgin, she wouldn’t bother because she had lost nothing. You could hear adults talking together saying "Yintombi ingane yakho isaphila" (Your daughter is a virgin she is still alive). Even men together would say "ziyowala isibaya ngalentombi yakho (the cattle will amount your kraal because of your daughter). So the girl’s virginity brought pride even in the family of a girl. Even in the community the parents of a girl or girls restored their virginity were highly respected. Even the king respects the father of girls who keeps their virginity. Even (iqhikiza) sociological sister was proud if the girls under her regiment were keeping their virginity. She would encourage a girl to do ukusoma. Ukusoma refers to the intrarural sexual activity that does not include penetration. By holding her thighs tightly together, a woman could give sexual pleasure to a man.

Isoka (future husband) was proud with his virgin lover. He would test the girl to see whether she was weak or not by tempting her to do sex. Among her lovers he would choose a virgin to be a wife. Getting into marriage being a virgin formed a firm foundation of trust and good relationship in a marriage.
7.2.1.2. LOBOLA (BRIDE PRICE)

It was common among the Zulus to hear a man saying to her daughter "Hamba uyangilandela izinkomo kuloymuzi" (Go and fetch the cows for me from that home). To have many cows was a big thing. People would even bewitch a neighbor who is having more cows than theirs. To have a girl was a blessing because she would bring many cows through lobola. Cattle were used as the foremost form of brideweath transaction known as ilobolo. The usual number of ten cows could be supplemented by an additional head, "the eleventh cow, if the girl was originally intended to assure the purity of brides. On a wedding eve the bride was checked, or examined if she was still a virgin. If she was found already deflowered the eleventh cow would be withdrawn.

Paige, 1983:157 states

"Virginity tests at marriage are a particular crucial test, if a daughter proves to be a virgin, her family retains its honor, but if she fails her family is shamed and its fragmentation becomes a real possibility.

Significantly, female genitalia are also referred to as inkomo kamama. The payment of an additional cow, the eleventh one, given to the girl’s mother was a sign of gratefulness for the bride. So it was the duty of the parents and the community to re-instill the value of premarital virginity.

Talking to girls about the importance of maintaining virginity before marriage formed part of traditional puberty rituals known as umhlonyane (Krige 1968). This ritual was celebrated at the commencement of a girl’s menses, and was marked by ritual seclusion and instruction by elderly women on how to sit properly (ukuhlala ngentombi) and generally how to conduct oneself with modesty and dignity as a fertile young woman.
She would soon be deemed ready for courtship. So, she needed to be taught ways to ensure that she would not expose inkomo kamama, which is losing her virginity.

7.2.1.3. THE REED CEREMONY.

The reed ceremony was also a motive behind virginity testing. Only virgins had to attend and dance for the reed ceremony. It is where the chief or the King could choose a future wife.

The reed dance ceremony was a yearly traditional or customary event. The reed of a virgin remained fresh and straight until the following day. If a girl was no longer a virgin the reed would split in the middle or bend as Po-1 suggest. On the day of the ceremony, the girls sing and dance in front of everyone and the King. Each one is carrying her reed, showing off the breast, abdomen and buttocks. They should wear beaded skirts, which shield the front and expose the buttocks. A peer leader iqhikiza would lead her regiment with pride. The girls, parents and the community would admire the beauty of these pure girls, which are the flowers of the nation. Checking the young woman before going to the reed ceremony to establish her virgin status was the responsibility of elderly female relatives of the girl’s family. The reed ceremony motivated good behavior among girls.

7.2.1.4. NOMKHUBULWANE FESTIVITIES.

Virginity testing has long been a tradition in KwaZulu Natal, as a part of the Nomkhubulwane festivities to celebrate the goddess of rain and the fertility that the rain represented. Nomkhubulwane was another motive for girls to keep their virginity. This festive (Nomkhubulwane) was usually held in spring. The overriding theme of the festivities was to ask Nomkhubulwane to show her favors in the form of good crop and plentiful harvest. These fertility rites were also intended to ask the Goddess to bless her people with lots of children. Burglund, (1976:64) mentions that the Princess is looked upon as being a virgin. As such she is closely related to the young marriageable girls as well as to fertility in mankind.

Virgins had to dig up a patch of land and plant crops specifically for Nomkhubulwane's consumption and pleasure. This was done to thank the benevolent goddess. Only virgins were considered to be pure and good enough to prepare the soil that would usher forth Nomkhubulwane's garden of delights. These were rituals of a rural, agrarian people whose survival in terms of food and lineage links depended on the generosity and goodwill of Mother Nature. Nomkhubulwane was a female principle, immortal virgin, mother and protector of all Zulu girls and source of growth and creation. If she was not propitiated with customary obedience and due ceremony, the land and people may be attacked by violence, drought, conquest and diseases. Virginity testing ceremony aimed at re-instituting the rituals and behavior that would unleash the benign, mediatory and creative forces of the goddess and the ancestors.

7.2.2. CURRENT MOTIVATIONS OF VIRGINITY TESTING RITUAL IN KWAMASHU DISTRICT.

7.2.2.1. AFRICAN RENAISSANCE

The term African renaissance refers broadly to the philosophy of re-awakening and developing all that is essentially African. The concept of African renaissance has been widely embraced by black intellectuals especially and the theme has come to be associated with the current era of Mbeki, administration as a type of national guiding philosophy (Mbeki 1998). Virginity tests have come back as people think it is culturally right. Virginity testing is a custom of cultural value and the country is in the process of African Renaissance. Virginity testing is revived to encourage the revival of black consciousness. Modern testors and testees feel that we have ignored our cultural practices and the values they bring to us as people. Ukhlowlwa kwezintombi is a cultural practice, which we need to revive in order to demonstrate our commitment about going back to our roots. That is why testors and testees coming from all corners of the township, dressed in colorful traditional Zulu regalia to engage themselves in ukhlowlwa kwezintombi. They are confident and determined to undergo virginity testing as a traditional ceremony, which has re-emerged as part of Zulu culture.

7.2.2.2. CRIME (RAPE) AND HEALTH ISSUES (HIV/AIDS)

Rape is an unlawful intention to have sexual intercourse with the woman without her consent and penetration of the vagina takes place. (Pillemer, 1999:112)

In this country, the rate of child abuse is increasing, KwaZulu Natal is said to be worse. Informant reveal that abusers are not only strangers. They include immediate relatives such as real fathers, stepfathers, brothers and uncles. In townships such as KwaMashu children are raped now and again, that is why this ukhlowlwa kwezintombi is revived. Most of the kids when they are raped seem to keep quiet about it. Testors believe that ukhlowlwa (testing) help to reveal if the child has been raped. Some testors make testees to mark the date of testing in the testees notebook. They believe this can help to trace back the date of rape. Certification too is believed to help in this regard.
Considering HIV/AIDS catastrophe one can count on "True Love Waits" and virginity testing as means of prevention. South Africa has the fastest growing HIV and AIDS epidemic in the world. KwaZulu Natal is the most afflicted province and more especially in townships of KwaZulu Natal. It is believed by the testors that the practice has a benefit of guarding against HIV/AIDS. The informants believe that virginity testing protects the girls from different types of evil. It helps to avoid HIV/AIDS and many other diseases. So health issues motivated the come back of virginity testing. The informants are positive that virginity testing actually presents a culturally appropriate way to combat things like teenage pregnancy and the spread of sexually transmitted diseases and HIV/AIDS.

Virginity testing is trusted as a solution to prevent new diseases and the need to worry about contraceptives and condoms. Women's bodies are believed to be like nests, where not only babies grow but where potential deadly germs including HIV/AIDS grow and hide. That is why they are seen as the incubators of HIV/AIDS and hence the victims of it. The KwaMashu society has realized that in its youth cultural values and natural sexual behavior, ukuhlolwa kweziniombi is the answer and weapon against HIV/AIDS. Total abstinence from sex is the best cure for HIV/AIDS and teenage pregnancies. In this regard informants see virginity testing as a tool to achieve abstinence. Informants who are against virginity testing show dissatisfaction when one pair of gloves is used for all the testees claiming that they are transferring the disease to other testees.

7.2.2.3. TEENAGE PREGNANCIES AND FATHERLESS CHILDREN

Due to the vast number of teenage pregnancies informants feel that virginity testing is the only way to re-instill what they view as lost cultural values such as chastity before marriage, modesty and self respect. According to them regular virginity testing represents the surest way to repair the frayed moral fabric of society that has led to the ever-increasing problems of teenage pregnancies. Some testors are against the use of condoms especially in teenagers, feeling that condom promote lust for sex. High numbers of teenage pregnancies are as a result of the fact that the involvement of iiqhiktza (sociological sister) in a love affair of teenage couple was replaced by individualized or private love affair.

In KwaZulu Natal there is a number of regimental groupings, which operates in virginity testing. Those include all African cultural group (Amagugu ase-Africa, Isigqi Sesintu, Isivivane Samasiko) and many more. In KwaMashu Isivivane Samasiko operates. Its founder Andile Gumede was motivated to revive the ritual of virginity testing under this regimental name in 1997. She believed that the revival of dormant Zulu customs like virginity testing as a practical way to reclaim element of culture that may help to solve modern day problems. She knew about virginity testing when she was seven years old. Her grandmother was always taking her aunt behind the house to inspect her. In 1993 she was working in the Magistrate Court in a rural area of KwaZulu Natal. She realized that most teenagers who came to apply for identification documents did not know their fathers but have their mothers. This was a big motivation for her to revive the ritual. She realized that black people have children but no families. She regarded ‘praise’ as an essential factor. After a girl is found to be a virgin she will be praised thus encouraged to keep virginity. In 1993 she got four grannies to help her with the examination of girls. She then also learned. She believes that parents should sit down with their girls and explain to them about being a virgin.
According to her, certificates are a form of praising the girls. Sometimes certificates enhance lobola for the girls. She is reviving this ritual under the name of Nomkhubulwane.
CHAPTER 8

WHAT ARE THE CURRENT DEBATES ON VIRGINITY TESTING

Virginity testing has invited many debates in South Africa. Interviewees who are for virginity testing claim that it is a cultural practice and it has taken place long time ago. Some non-participants are asking whose culture is it, who defines the parameters of culture? People in Gender Studies view it as a gender practice, as the focus is on girls only.

8.1 VIRGINITY TESTING AND GENDER

Some interviewees feel that virginity testing is gender based. They feel that it focuses only on women and neglect men. In the Mail and Guardian (1999) Suzanne Leclerc-Madlala claims that there is nothing done about the boys. She claims that most women in this country, their first sexual experience have been one of coerced sex. Losing their virginity has obviously not been their choice. Agenda (44 of 2000) witnesses this when it says:

"Aids campaigns set up women as targets for intervention and in the process, often presented them only as victims waiting for rescue or empowerment." Attention was focused on women’s particular vulnerability to the Aids epidemic- a vulnerability that was both physiological and social (women are more likely to be subjected to coercive sex and less able to negotiate safer sex)."

This shows gender inequality. Agenda (44 of 2000) sees gender inequality as the imbalance when analysing the position and status of women in relation to the position of other women.

Men are proved to have many sexual relationships than women. So with HIV and Aids women are conceived as natural containers of HIV infection, whereas men are likely to be the most spreaders of the disease. Leclerc-Madlala in her 15 July 2000 paper feels that examining girls to determine their virginity status is another thread to reinforce a web of meaning that places women and women’s sexuality at the epicenter of blame for the current AIDS epidemic.

8.2 RELIABILITY OF TESTORS.

From 1950 to 1965 virginity testing was conducted by old ladies who had reached menopause. As Po-1 suggests most interviewees who are against virginity testing question the reliability of the results of the current testors. They claim that they are too young for the task. The feeling is that when the young testor tests the virgin she is tempting the latter to have a desire for sex. Na-4 feels that because of the lack of experience current testors may claim that the girl is no longer a virgin even if she still is. Other testors let the girl pass the test because they fear the parents of the girl in question. Most testors claim that they have the skill of testing whereas some don’t.

Na-3 claims that her neighbour’s child became pregnant and yet she passed as a virgin during testing session. Po-3 reveals that some testees fake virginity. Some put ice in the place of the hymen. Some interviewees claim that some testees put white meat to fake virginity. The testors sometimes do faking of virginity to acquire the status of good guardianship in their areas. Interviewees feel that the faking is sometimes promoted by the behavior of the parents. Other parents have a tendency of compelling their daughters to go for virginity testing. Then the child go there even if she knows that her virginity has vanished. The other one who has no courage of faking is embarrassed in front of others and her parents. Her dignity and that of the parents is lowered.
8.3. LACK OF PRIVACY AND CRIME (RAPE)

The interviewees feel that there is not enough privacy when these testings are done. They are conducted in the sportsgrounds where boys use to play. The shield done is not enough as boys can peep and see what is happening. Na-1 and Na-2 feel that certification, announcement in the radios, magazines invite criminals to rape virgin girls. There is a belief that if you have sex with a child, HIV/Aids is cured. In this way when the victory of a girl who has passed the test is announced and appears in papers and magazines, rapist are invited. The Pe-4 states that other testors give testees trophies when they are twenty-one and have passed the virginity test.

These victimised girls are not catered for as far as virginity testing is concerned. Na-3 feels that the raped child is punished for the sin, which she did not commit. This happens when the child is rapped and keeps quiet about the incidence. When the child goes for virginity testing she is scolded in the same way with those who destroyed their virginity intentionally. Other testors claim that it is possible to see that the child is raped. Her labia are deeper shade of pink, vaginal opening slightly bigger, the vagina is not tight and the walls are slightly lubricated. The white dot and lacey veil show the evidence of disturbance (abuse).

The interviewee Na-3 states that the girls at school are taught about their rights. She feels that virginity testing is nothing less than the violation and violence against women. This group of interviewees argue that virginity testing counter to stipulation that are in the national constitution that uphold rights to privacy, bodily integrity and outlaw all forms of gender discrimination. South Africa’s 1999 Human rights report submitted to the United Nation’s recommended that the SA government take specific steps to change traditional views advocating virginity testing in those communities where it occurs.
8.4. VIRGINITY TESTING AS A SOLUTION

Most testors believe that virginity testing is a prime strategy in the fight against Aids. Andile Gumede, the founder of virginity testing in 1997 believe that virginity testing is the way to re-instill what is viewed as lost cultural values such as chastity before marriage, modest and self respect. Regular virginity testing represents the surest way to repair the frayed moral fabric of society that has led to the ever-increasing problems of teenage pregnancies; sexual transmitted diseases and HIV/Aids, which is destroying the community.

These testors believe that nkululwakwezintombi becomes a rescue after a child has been abused in tracing back the date of abuse as these kids do not tell after their victimization. Some interviewees who promote virginity testing feel that when you are tested there is no need for contraceptives and condoms. To them these protections promote misbehavior among women. Np-2 states that virginity testing helps in the sense that sometimes you pay full lobola and yet the girl is deflowered, so if she is tested you know of her condition.

In November 2000 Bona, Thabile Majola (19), Gugu (17) and Banothile Mthembu (25) enjoy virginity testing. They state that no one compels them to go for the test. All of them live in KwaMashu. Gugu Gumede feels that virginity testing will help her to grow well and will also enable her to take positive and solid decisions about her future.

Again in this magazine, Andile Gumede compares initiation where body mutilations are done, with virginity testing. She states that in the former people die, whereas in the latter no one dies. Reggie Khumalo and the Deputy of Women’s Health Care Centre, Fiyani Marina in this Bona, see virginity testing as of great help in preventing teenage pregnancies and HIV/AIDS. They see virginity testing as a determining factor in the payment of lobola, as to how many cows must be paid for a girl. They state that virginity testing helps in chastity control so that the girls can grow enough before they can think of sex.

8.5. WORKSHOPS AND SEMINARS

The outbreak of the HIV/AIDS epidemic has shaken the whole world. Many measures have been tried and tested to be the solution to this killing disease. One of those measures is virginity testing. This ritual is back after its period of silence for sexual transmitted diseases especially HIV/AIDS. Virginity testing has evoked many workshops and seminars. In these workshops and seminars, there is always a diversity of opinion. People under Human Rights and Gender Commissions see it as a form of violation and violence against women. The other side sees it as an essential tool, which is culturally right, and as an answer to modern day problems, which are facing our youth.

Few of those seminars will be tabulated below:

CHAPTER 9

CONCLUSION, RECOMMENDATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS FOR FUTURE RESEARCH.

9.1 CONCLUSION

In Zulu traditional history, virginity before marriage was highly regarded and was a socially regulated norm. Only a girl with a suitor was tested. Virginity before marriage brought dignity and status for the girl, the parents and the community concerned. Cattle were used as the foremost form of brideweath transaction known as ilobolo, more especially the eleventh cow (inkomo kamama). Ilobolo was a compensation for the girl’s parents for losing their daughter to the groom’s side. It was the responsibility of the old women of the community and the amaqhikiza to see to it that the iishitshi (young uncommitted girl) did not expose the inkomo kamama, that is, was keeping her virginity.

Currently the role of the amaqhikiza has been substituted by individual love life. The peers appear to have a great influence in this regard. Ukusoma is no longer practiced due to the unavailability of amaqhikiza role. Parents should take the role of amaqhikiza. They should sit down with their girls, explain the consequences of sexual intercourse before marriage. Virginity testing is back for different reasons, that is, teenage pregnancies, child abuses and sexual transmitted diseases like HIV/AIDS. Zulu people are facing a dilemma. Sex and love lives are traditionally taboos in Zulu people. It is not easy to talk about it especially to children. That is why a girl in the past could not accept a proposal verbally. Ucu was a means of communication in this regard. Schoeman (1975) sees “ucu” as a specific article of beadwork. Due to multiculturalism in South Africa, mutual influence is inevitable. This influence causes another leg of the black person to be across the river while the other one is still on the other side. Change in society is also inevitable as Vansina (1985:114) proposes that tradition mirrors the society. Vansina further proposes that as society changes both tradition and the motivation for the tradition modifies.

9.2 FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

_Ukuhlolwa kwezintombi_ is currently practiced in girls as early as five years of age. This is because of the changing motivations, which are no longer _loholo_ and status but teenage pregnancies, abuses and incurable sexual diseases. There is a belief in abusers with HIV/Aids that if they have sexual inter-course with young children HIV/Aids can be cured. People should be taught about the falsehood of this belief. People should be given adequate knowledge about the disease especially that, "prevention is better than cure" as far as this disease is concerned. Even if we can accept changes in our lives but we should guard against the impacts which will negatively affect the traditional values of our rituals.

Testors should have training centres where they can acquire adequate skills of performing the ritual. There are still old people who know very well about the procedures of the ritual. Those people should be given the opportunities to share their valuable knowledge with the modern testors. Secrecy of the ritual should be regarded as an important essential to protect the testees from the abusers. The shields they use in the sports grounds when the testing is in process are not enough. They use bed sheets or towels to hide only the testee on that particular moment. They should build like portable tents to ensure privacy. Sometimes you find boys playing in the sports ground while testing is in progress.

Adequate knowledge of the testors will alleviate the complaints on the part of non-participants. They feel that insufficient knowledge puts the testees on jeopardy of misjudgments. Their concern is that some testors declare some testees deflowered even if they are still virgins. There should be enough clarity given to the testees about ukuhlohwana. Girls should be encouraged to go for testing but should not be forced. As I have mentioned that some victims of abuse do not tell about it, they seem to be punished for the faults of the abusers when they are found deflowered during testing sessions. This brings forth to say that children must be encouraged to talk about their experiences either good or bad.

Adequate knowledge can again help in producing valid results. Some non-participants feel that some interviewees fake virginity by putting ice and meat fat in the place of the hymen.

Ukuhlohwana kwezintombi is in some way of great help in preventing teenage pregnancies and sexual transmitted diseases like HIV/Aids as it promotes abstinence from sex. It doesn’t help if the child is born with HIV/Aids. It also does not help if a person is injected or incised with affected equipment. The former way of acquiring a disease, which is sex, is more common. That is why virginity testing seem to play a major role in this regard.

The impact of multicultural contact led ukuhlohwana kwezintombi to its near demise, but coming of black government into power in 1994 might be an additional factor to the revival of ukuhlohwana kwezintombi. It reminded black people about their roots. Ukuhlohwana kwezintombi has also evoked other rituals and ceremonies, which had shown signs of disappearance. Those rituals are umhlonyane (puberty rites) and umemulo (coming of age ceremony). After conducting umhlonyane for their girl, the parents are encouraged or become keen to perform umemulo ceremony for the girl. To ensure that the girl undergoes umemulo being a virgin, the parents have to apply chastity control through virginity testing.
Andile Gumede, the founder of virginity testing in 1997, feels that certification is used as a means of praise. Some interviewees feel that certification enhances marriage proposals from a large population of young men who prefer to tie the wedding knots with virgins. On the other hand, some interviewees feel that certificates invite abusers who always have a lust for virgins. This means that certificates and other means of praise for testees, who pass the tests, have a dual impact, that is, positive and negative ones.

The health department should be actively involved as far as virginity testing is concerned. Some informants are not happy about one pair of gloves which is used for all the testees involved on that particular day. Their concern stems from the fact that these testors might be the transmitters of the disease from one testee to the other. Health department should provide enough gloves and health staff should be present during testing sessions to ensure healthy procedures.

People who are involved in gender studies, and other interviewees feel that ukuhlolwa kwezintombi is gendered and politically inclined. They feel that the focus is only on girls and not on boys. Chastity control should also be applied to them. Youth centres should be formed where virginity is stressed also in boys. Testors should be workshopped to be able to inspect the boys too.

9.3 SUGGESTIONS FOR FUTURE RESEARCH

It should be researched whether virginity testing should be continued or discontinued due to the current debate based on the ritual. Gender commissioners see virginity testing as a means of violation of children’s rights. On the other hand, participants on some non-participants see it as a preventive measure as far as teenage pregnancies and incurable sexual diseases are concerned. The latter side of people believes on the principle of “prevention is better than cure.”
Certification, trophies and publication in media seem to essential from the participants' point of view. Some non-participants and those who are against virginity testing feel that these forms of reward for the successful testees, invite crime, that is, rape. This need further research whether these forms of reward are essential, if not, what could be alternatives?

The way of conducting the ritual has been modified greatly. To mention few changes: lack of privacy, frequency of testing, modern rewards, virginity faking, age of testors and testees and current motivation. Future research should look at the impact of these modifications in terms of the traditional value of the ritual and the related ones like umhlonyane (puberty rite) and umemulo (coming of age).

Future research should find out whether virginity testing should be further conducted by traditional testors or by professionals in medicine, that is, doctors and nurses or whether the juxtapositioning of the two is essential. I feel this need further research because other people feel that some testors can be the transmitters of incurable from one testee to the other. This transmission can be due to the incorrect use of the testing tools, like using the same pair of gloves for all the testees or non use of the glove at all. Certain testors declare chemical soaps as destroyers of virginity. Some people believe if the girl usually sleeps facing upwards, virginity goes away. Some feel that bicycle cycling and related games can destroy virginity. May be the presence of the medical profession can be a solution to this controversy.

Research should also be undertaken on boys' virginity testing since the focus has been mainly on girls. Focusing on girls virginity testing while boys are neglected does not solve the entire problem. This is due to the fact that sexual transmitted diseases like HIV/Aids and teenage pregnancies are mostly acquired through the sexual meeting of a male and a female. Most instances of rape come from the male side. Boys take the initiative as far as love life is concerned. That is why I feel that boys should also be tested.

ezinganeni zakhe.

She moved from across the Tugela River at Ntembeni. She is the mother of Pewula Dube who sometimes talks over the radio about Zulu traditional customs on Sundays. She stays at KwaMashu in section D. Her husband loved traditional customs and used to pass them to his children.

Q : 1. Waqala nini ukuhlola?

When did you start conducting virginity testing?

A : Eminyakeni emihlanu eyedlule la KwaMashu.

I started in five years ago here at KwaMashu.
Q:2. Walutholaphi ulwazi lokuhlola?
Where did you learn the testing skill?
A: Nami ngangihlolwa, ulwazi luyadluliselwa kwabalandelayo.
I used to be tested before, the knowledge is passed to the successors.

Q:3. Kuqala kwakuhlola umuntu ongakanani?
In the past from which age was the testing conducted?
A: Kwakuhlola iquhikiza, ingoduso, inkehli noseyoshada.
Testing was conducted on iquhikiza, a committed girl and the one who is about to marry.

Q:4. Kwakuhlola umuntu ongakanani?
What was the required age for the testor?
A: Kwakuhlola umuntu ongasayi ezinsukwini zakhe osemadala.
Testing was conducted by a person who had reached menopause, an old person.

Q:5. Yini kuhlole umuntu ongasayi esikhathini?
Why should it be a person who has reached menopause?
A: Phela kuthiwa umuntu osemadala akasenamanyala, uma esaya ocansini lo ohlolo ayisukwini ngene ayihloayo ukuba nayo ifune kuya ocansini.
It is said that an old person is pure, when the testor is still practising sex, she is tempting the testee to do sex.

Q:6. Kwakubakhona bani ngesikhathi intombazane ihlolwa?
Who should be there during the testing session?
A: Unina wentombazane wayengavunyelwe ukubuka.

The mother of a girl was not allowed to watch.

Q: 7. Kwakuhlolwa kanjani?

How was the testing conducted?

A: Intombi ibilala ibheke phezulu kubukwe iso ukuthi isaphelele yini.

Ikhanda libe sezansi esingezansi sibe phezulu ukuze kusheshe kubonakale.

The girl used to sleep facing upwards and the testor would look for the hymen. The head should be on the lower level and the abdomen should be on the upper level, so that testing should be easier.

Q: 8. Kongasentombi kwakwenziwanjani?

What was done if the testee was already deflowered?

A: Abahlolayo babehlangana ngamakhanda baphimise amathe.

The testors used to negotiate about the matter and spit.

Q: 9. Wawufakwa yini umcako esiphongweni uma umuntu esehloliwe?

A: Babemqabulakhona enkomeni zingakandi kanje izifo.

They used to kiss her on top of the vagina before these diseases were spread.

Q: 11. Uyabonakala yini ukuthi umutu uyintombi engahlolwanga?
Can you tell before the test whether the girl is a virgin or not?

A: Yes, the true virgin can be seen. You can see under the eyes (izikhece). The umfasankomo (part behind the knees) became firm if the girl was a virgin. If the girl was insulted of lost virginity, she was pocked on the thighs near the vagina with the nails. If the nails enter she was no longer a virgin.

Q: 12. Kuphathelene yini ukuhlola nomkhosi womhlanga?

Is virginity testing related with the reed ceremony?

A: Yes, because if the girl was no longer a virgin the reed would split in the middle. The reed ceremony started at oSuthu then Enyokeni in Mamchiza’s homestead. Those from other cultures like the Swazis bring a bundle of reeds but they are celebrating with the Zulu should bring only one. This ceremony is celebrated in September. It is where the king chooses his future wife. He used to send his helper and say: "Go and beat the shield there for me" (Go and take that girl for me) The helper would take away the reed from that chosen girl.

Q:13. Wayehlawula ngani ongasentombi?
What was the penalty for loss virginity?

A: Umfana oyilimazile wayekhipha inkomo kanina, eyenkosi kanye nembuzi yamantombazane. Amantombazane ayeyiklebhula ngezandla, idliwe yizinja bageze ngomswani wayo. Umfana okhulelisile wayekhipha inkomo yesidikli noma ingezamagceke, ebulawa kwantombazane, eyenkosi. A boy who destroyed virginity should pay a mother's cow, one for the chief and a goat, it was torn by the girls, eaten by the dogs and the girl cleanse themselves with the waste from the offal (umswani). The boy who made the girl pregnant had to pay a cow for cleansing the home (inkomo yesidikli or ingezamagceke) which was slaughtered in the girls home and the cow for the king.

Q:14. Kuhlangene yini ukuhlola noNomkhubulwane? Is virginity testing related to Nomkhubulwane?

Nomkhubulwane is related to fertility and rain. She is the earth God. Old ladies used to plough Nomkhubulwane’s field before they wash. Young girls were not allowed to enter into Nomkhubulwane’s field.

Q:15. Yini othanda ukuyengeza?
Is there anything you want to add?

A: Ukudla okudliwa namuhla kuyakhuluphalisa umuntu angaze ayethuke ingane. Uma intombazane ijwayele ukulala ibheke phezulu, iso liyehla.

Today’s food make people fat, a person can insult a girl of lost virginity because of her body even if she is still a virgin. If the girl is used to sleep facing upwards the hymen lowers.

abakini bavuka bayoyikhetha esibayeni sakubo mfana inkomo.
Abakubo ntombi abakhiphi uma sebekhiphile abakomfana.

The girl’s parents should pay with a cow for cleansing other girls. When you say there and there that a boy has destroyed your virginity, people from the girl’s side wake up early in the morning to go and choose any cow from the boy’s kraal to cleanse the girls with. If the boy’s side had paid that cow, the girl’s side does not pay.

Q.9 Kwenzekani ngenkomo kanini uma engasentombi?
What happens with the eleventh cow if the girl is no longer a virgin?

A: Ayikhokhwa.
It is not paid.

Q:10. Ikhona yini indlela yokubona ukuthi umuntu akasentombi engahlolwanga?

Is there any way you can tell that a girl is deflowered even if the test is not done?
A: Kuyabonakala emva kwezitho iminyaba iba mibi.
amable amathamba.

It is seen behind the legs, the stretch marks look bad, the breasts become soft.

Q:11. Yiluphi ushintsho olubonayo ekukhokweni kwamanje nokwakudala?

What change have you noticed if you compare virginity testing of the past and present?

A: Kusukela ku12 weminyaka kuya phansi wayengahlolwa. Kwakuhlolwa othombile. Okunye ukuthi abahlolayo manje abalibeki iqiniso, basaba abazali bezingane. Okunye ukuthi abaziyo ngokuhlola bayancipha ngoba intombazane ibonakala isikhulelwe kade iholwa.

2 years and below was not tested. You were tested after puberty. Secondly the testors now do not tell the truth if the girl is deflowered, they fear the girl’s parents. Thirdly there are very few people who know about virginity testing as sometimes you can find the girl pregnant after she has been tested.

Q:12. Akwenzeki yini iikhulelwe kade igudiwa?

Can a girl become pregnant after non-penetrative sexual intercourse?

A: Kuyenzeka. Umthungo uma iikhulelwe uyaggama.
It happens. If the girl is pregnant the line in the stomach to the vagina broadens.

Q: 13. Ungathini ngomkhosi womhlanga?

What can you say about the reed ceremony?

A: Manje ziyakhelelwa umhlanga, kanti ngenkathi izikhulela, umhlanga uyagoba umaingesentombi.

They now pick the reed for the girl, whereas if the girl picks the reed and she is no longer a virgin, the reed bends.

It wasn’t practiced in my section at KwaMashu.

Q:5 Ungavuma ukuthi ingane yakho ihlolwe?

Would you allow your daughter to be tested.

A: Ngeke ngivume ngoba kubiza ukudlwengulwa. Uma abantu bazi ukuthi ingane iseyintombi bayayilandela.

I won’t allow because it attracts the rapists. When the rapists know that a girl is still a virgin, they follow her.

Q:6. Bezwa ngani abanye abantu ukuthi ingane iyintombi nto?

How do other people hear that the girl is still a virgin?

A: Kuqala kwakuyimfihlo, kodwa manje akuseyiyo, kukhishwa izitifiketi, komagazini nasemsakazweni.

In the past it was confidential, not now. Certificates are issued, appear in magazines and announced in radios.

Q:7. Kunamthelela muni ukuhlolwa entombazaneni?

What effect does virginity testing have on the status of the girl?

A: Umuntu ohlala kakhulu ajabulele ukuthi uyintombi uba nenkinga yokuthola abantwana.
A person who abstains herself from sexual practices for a long time have a problem of getting babies in the future.

Q: 8. Yikuphi wena okubona ukuthi kungalekelela ekuthini intombazane iziphathe kahle?
