SOME WOODCUTS

By CLEMENT SÈNÈQUE.

FOREWORD.

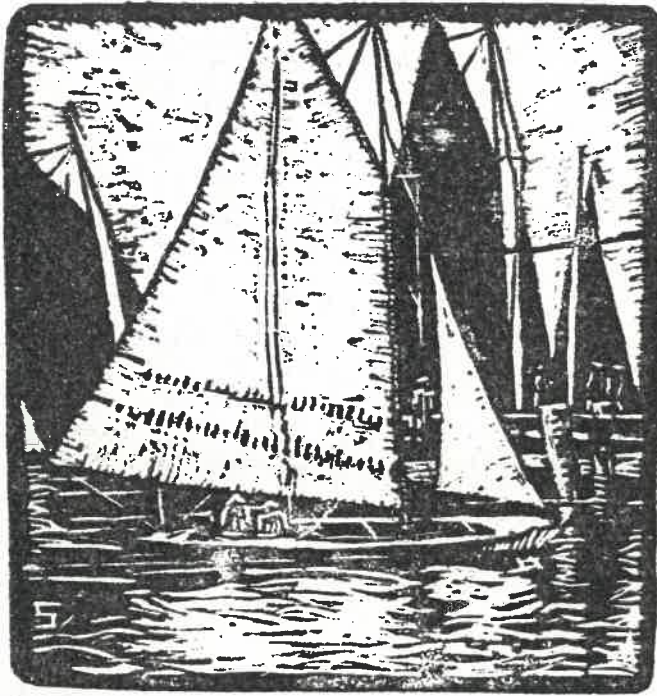

THE recent revival of the art of pictorial printing from engraved wood blocks has grown as a medium of original expression by the individual artist from the decline of the wood engraving for reproductive illustration, when in the 19th Century great illustrative artists were content to draw direct on to the block for engravers such as Swain, Dalziel, Hooper and Linton to treat with sympathetic craftsmanship.

This art was gradually superseded by the photographic process plate—the line, or half-tone block—familiar to all in the

The Housing Act, 1920, contained the provisions enabling local authorities to secure the repair, maintenance and sanitary condition of houses at the expense of owners, and provision was also made for their enforcement by order of the Minister of Health if after receiving a complaint and holding a local inquiry he was satisfied that there had been default on the part of a local authority.

In this rough sketch, drawn by the designer of this small home, the general effect of a picturesque fitting in with our local background is artistically demonstrated. The bold pillars supporting the roof of the loggia give an impression of strength combined with grace and the whole effect is distinctly attractive.
